Get better performance for less cost

The Solution

Teams from two development centers for a major US financial services company rely on a managed AuraTester deployment to improve application productivity, system performance and user experience without disruption or friction. Now both teams can automate the previously manual, functional and regression tests while the administrator can manage the process from a centralized location. Saving months of man hours in manual QA testing cycles.

Developers can now guarantee reliable performance on Oracle Forms production servers. They create, run and back-up real-world testing routines via a single interface without touching the production server.

No scripting required

No software installation across multiple PCs

No need to slow down the agile development cycle
